

Essay

I really think the Internet helps us a lot to express who we are, how we feel and how we want to be as free and happy individuals. We don't want to be judged by someone or a group of people. I think a lot of people can relate to someone for instance on social media and that is a real good thing about the internet. Sometimes a burden's falling off your shoulders if you find out you are not the only one walking around with certain feelings or ways of thinking. It helps you to stand up for yourself and accept who you are.

But on the other hand Internet is full of danger, especially the social media. Everybody can say anything nowadays, and it doesn't matter if anyone gets or feels hurt. The people who spread things they say it's free speech. For instance if a famous social media Icon says something his or her followers will believe in. If they want to let other people think the same as they do they spread something into the world. Sometimes (read most of the times) there is no source reference. The saddest part is that the words spread so damn fast, they mutate and they create unrest that is almost unstoppable. Some people will use it to spread conspiracies who they believe in. They create more hate into the world. And that is what I'm so sad about every day when I read articles on the internet. That is the most difficult thing... is it free speech, or hate speech. I know that is so hard, because there are wars, certain religions, and the right to acquit.

I believe that there is room for everybody in this world despite your skin color, gender, origin. What I want is we all walk together hand in hand. That's what makes the world beautiful.

Live and let live and spread the love...